

Richard Dennis AM PSM

Richard Dennis is a consultant drafter based in South Australia. He has over 40 years' experience as a legislative drafter, with his career starting in the South Australian Parliamentary Counsel's Office in 1982. Richard held the position of South Australian Parliamentary Counsel between 2006 and 2015. Since January 2016, Richard has worked as a contract drafter and legal practitioner, working in a number of jurisdictions.

Richard has worked in all areas of the law but has had a particular interest in drafting legislation relating to:

- energy markets
- access regimes
- natural resource management
- water, environment and biodiversity conservation, licensing and management
- petroleum and mining regulation
- planning and development
- workers compensation, industrial law, and workers health and safety
- the constitution and work of tribunals, disciplinary proceedings and administrative law
- public health
- local government.

In addition to drafting primary and secondary legislation, Richard has also drafted rules, codes of practice and by-laws.

Richard is available for short-term work or longer contracts, including for major projects.
